

Telomeres are the caps that protect the ends of chromosomes. As we age, telomeres grow shorter, preventing cells from being able to replenish tissue, which is necessary to help live a long, healthy life.